DIRECTOR'S NOTE

As Chicago closed last year, Ms. Kolb and I started getting excited about what to do next. I've found over my 10 years of teaching as a Trojan that it helps soothe the sadness of each show's closing to think, "What's next?"

The first show I said out loud to Ms. Kolb was: Anastasia. Little did I know that it would mean a year of Russian-themed productions as I had not yet chosen Fools until well into that summer. I'd like to take this opportunity to encourage you to donate to Ukraine Relief efforts that are linked in the QR code below. While we can have some escapism into Russian history and culture, it's with very clear eyes that we can recognize the terror they currently cause.

Growing up, I loved the animated movie, Anastasia, and I have come to love this musical just as much (even though many friends have been concerned when I explain this musical does not have a bat character). Sorry for the spoiler.

To the students involved in this production, I thank you for your determination and work ethic. We have taken on a large musical, and I am proud of each of you! To the seniors, I will miss you greatly, and I hope that you continue to pursue theatre in your life - whether it be as a performer, a technician, or an audience member for your lifetime.

The journey we watch Anya go on is one of courage and faith. It is one thing to have courage but it is another to have faith in your own intuition, your own abilities, and in who you are meant to be. Students, my hope for you is that you trust your own intuition and believe in yourself, always. And maybe you do a lot of work in your young life to become someone who you think you're meant to be, and I hope you'll have the courage to change course if you find your heart has changed. Don't settle for a life you think is expected of you. Choose joy.

Mrs. Julie-Kate Hazelrigg
Director

Mr. Jake Stevens, *in memory.

On January 11, Mrs. Hazelrigg emailed Mr. Stevens and some other teachers asking if any of them had a metal funnel they could use for a project in Technical Theatre. She realized late in the planning process that their plastic funnel would not work and then they were out of time to order a metal one. Mr. Stevens quickly responded that he didn't have one, but he thought he could make one! She sent him the sizing they needed for it and within an hour he had made a perfectly fitting funnel for the class project! Mr. Stevens was always so friendly and willing to help anyone with anything they needed. The classes used that funnel throughout the next week to pour sand into PVC and create a curve. Thanks to that funnel, now our custom scenic drops hang the way we had envisioned for our musical.
