DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Thank you all for joining us for this endearing, high-energy, rock musical. This show, in its core writing and design, relies heavily on imagination as we travel across the US and beyond/below. It uses minimalist solutions, stylistic storytelling, and the idea of a prop to tell the fast-paced story. The Lightning Thief: the Percy Jackson Musical is an homage to the first book in the Percy Jackson series and not so much a verbatim retelling. You'll see the book condensed into a story for the stage; If you are a fan of the series or a newcomer, we hope you enjoy this creative reimagining of the beloved book. Like a good book, we hope that this production allows you to escape into the world of half-bloods, myths, and monsters.

When we first selected this show, I was new to the series and was unfamiliar with the music; however, I quickly fell in love with the story and the songs. After listening to the tracks on repeat for the past nine months or so, I am still a fan. Sometimes when you work with a show for so long, you can grow tired of the music, but this is a musical I don't want to come to an end. Each day in rehearsal has been a joy, and every night on my drive home, I'm singing the songs. I am truly going to miss this production not only for the show itself, but also for this special group of artists I have had the privilege to work with.

One of my favorite moments in rehearsal has been when everything breaks down into laughter. For a show with such dark moments, we have continued to find the joy in each corner of its universe and joy with each other. When I look back over the glow of this season, I see bright beginnings for my young students and perfectly polished capstones for my seniors. Not many shows can give us that. The joy the audience sees and hears onstage from this production is so tangible and real, that it can make grownups feel nostalgic for the times we felt "seen" during our growing-up-years.

Thank you to this amazing cast, crew, pit musicians, and production staff for bringing this story to life. Building this show together has been such a joy. With the close of this show, we'll be taken back to the real world and out of Camp Half-Blood. The monsters of the real world will be there again, but fighting the monsters feels so much easier with friends by your side. "As long as you are here with me."
